

Math Websites

Here are some fun and interesting sites you can visit with your child to help with math.

<http://figurethis.org/index.html>

This site has some fun problem solving activities.

<http://www.gamequarium.com/math.htm>

There is a multitude of games to choose from that your child can practice various math skills.

<http://nlvm.usu.edu/>

Find math manipulatives for K-12 in the areas of number and operation sense, algebra, geometry, measurement, and probability

<http://nces.ed.gov/nceskids/createagraph/default.aspx>

Create graphs from data gathered

<http://playkidsgames.com/mathGames.htm>

Interactive games that work on math facts

<http://www.coolmath.com/>

There is a multitude of games to choose from that your child can practice various math skills.

<http://www.aplusmath.com/>

At this site your child can practice addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division combinations using electronic flash cards and other games.

<http://www.funbrain.com/>

This site offers different games to practice fluency with combinations.

<http://www.ixl.com/>

This site offers multiple practice with K-12 skills in math.

http://www.exploratorium.edu/math_explorer/fantasticFour.html

In this site you'll play a game called Fantastic Four. You have to figure out the total of a card by using different operations.

<http://www.aaamath.com/>

At this site you can choose a math topic and grade level to practice a certain math skill.

http://www.professorgarfield.org/pgf_kbkids.html

This site also offers multiple practice with k-12 math skills.

<http://illuminations.nctm.org/>

This site has games and brain teasers that challenge your thinking. There is also a link to play games with others math gamers around the world.

<http://nrich.maths.org/frontpage>

This site has fun math games that are both interactive or can be downloaded to play at home. It also has valuable math resource information for parents and teachers.